By the time you read this our 2017 Fun Fly will be history and hopefully it will have been a real success. The weather doesn't look like it will be an ideal day, but maybe things will change.

The Air Adventure program at Oshkosh is also over and while everyone is writing about all the new and exciting airplanes and displays, I'm an old guy and will concentrate on the past conventions. The first gathering I attended was at Rockford in 1964. At that time I thought it was a gigantic air show and I had never seen so many airplanes in one place. But this didn't last, Rockford let the convention slip away to Oshkosh in 1970. It has since grown into a truly gigantic affair with over 600,000 people and more than 10,000 airplanes in attendance.

In 60's everyone built from scratch because they didn't have kits ready to assemble. During the 70's a few kits were available but it was a rocky time in the kit business. Many promises were made, down payments made, and in some cases, kits were not delivered. Most of the planes were wood and fabric or tube and fabric. The two exceptions being the Midget Mustang and Thorp T-18 which were all metal. With today's kits every bolt and rivet is supplied along with each rivet hole being drilled. The finished planes look and fly like a factory build plane.

The photos on page 3-4 are of aircraft from an early 60's convention. Sorry for the poor quality of the pictures but I converted a slide of each to a format suitable for print. You will note from the caption with each photo, that since each plane is approximately 50 years old many are out of license.

I would like to thank Jim Rasmussen as he is now helping me put this newsletter together and sends them out to you each month.

Don't forget the meeting on Monday August 7th at 6:30.

As you read this, hopefully we have just concluded another successful fun-fly. As I write this we have just finished our night of set-up. But the support for the event is good again this year and it looks like the weather is going to be kind to us. But the fun-fly also marks another turning point in the season. That's right; fall is just around the corner. And while we continue to enjoy the warm weather and get as much flying in, it's also the perfect time to start thinking about a new plane for next year. Maybe your skills have advanced this season and now you would like a plane with a little more capability. Or maybe you want to try building a kit for the first time versus an ARF. There are a couple of us that are gearing up to build or scratch build some models this winter. Having a couple of us all building at the same time and sharing progress is a great way to help keep each other motivated through the long building season. Start looking around for inspiration, see what other modelers are flying, maybe something will inspire you to build something new. Until then, Happy Landings.
